Dear Graduates,

The day you have been waiting for, hoping for, working toward, struggling to reach, has finally arrived. Today you are receiving a Rutgers degree. Congratulations! I join those who have helped you along the way to this day of fanfare, including your faculty mentors, your fellow students, and your friends and loved ones, in applauding you for all the hard work and perseverance that have made this milestone moment possible. I hope you and your guests will enjoy our 252nd Anniversary Commencement, at which we welcome Mr. Dan Schulman to join us in celebrating all that you have accomplished here.

Of course, it is not Rutgers’ goal simply to prepare you for this great day—we have, I hope, prepared you for the many days and decades to come. Your Rutgers degree reflects your readiness to pursue opportunities and address problems that will present themselves over the years. We haven’t given you all the answers, but I hope we have further refined your habits of critical thinking, stoked your passion for lifelong learning, and inspired you to take an active, productive role in your communities and in the larger world.

Let me also take this moment to welcome you into the family of Rutgers alumni, now more than 500,000 strong, who are putting their Rutgers education to work. We hope you will always remain engaged with your alma mater, and you have our assurance that we will continue striving to build a university of ever-greater distinction and impact.

As you, our Class of 2018, enter new phases of your lives, please know that you go forth from Rutgers with our pride in your achievements, our fondest wishes for successful lives and careers, and, again, our congratulations.

Sincerely,

Robert Barchi
President
Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey
Dear Graduates,

It is with great satisfaction that I join with your family and friends and the Rutgers community in celebrating your tremendous accomplishments today. I am very proud of your success—and you should be, too. In my short time at Rutgers, I have seen you accomplish many great things. I thank you for the hard work, commitment, and passion you brought to campus and your studies. I congratulate you on your achievements.

As you enter the next chapters in your lives, I hope you will draw upon your experiences with classmates, faculty, and mentors. Remember how far you have come, and use what you have learned to remain engaged with the community and make positive contributions to the world. I wish you all the best as you endeavor to reach even greater heights.

Sincerely,

Debasish Dutta
Chancellor, Rutgers University–New Brunswick

Dear Graduates,

It gives me great pleasure to commend you for all of your persistence and dedication. Together with your faculty mentors, student colleagues, friends, and families, I applaud your numerous achievements. I am proud of your efforts and congratulate you on your well-deserved successes and accomplishments.

Whether you advance your education or enter the workforce, remember what you have learned and continue to make exceptional contributions to the lives and communities around the world. Best wishes for continued success in your lives and careers.

Sincerely,

Brian L. Strom

Dan Schulman
Doctor of Humane Letters

Rutgers is proud to bestow upon Dan Schulman an honorary doctor of humane letters degree. As president and CEO of PayPal, Schulman is focused on transforming financial services to make life easier for billions of people around the world. With his deep experience in payments and mobile technology, Schulman is leading PayPal to reimagine how people move and manage money, and how merchants and consumers interact and transact.

Schulman is the recipient of the 2017 Brennan Legacy Award, established to honor the Supreme Court justice and his career-long commitment to social justice and "common human dignity." The Council for Economic Education named Schulman as its 2017 Visionary for promoting economic and financial literacy to create a better-informed society. He has been recognized as one of the top 10 CEOs in the world by Fortune, named one of the top 100 most creative people by Fast Company, and included on the 2017 Recode 100 list of people making the biggest impact on business and technology. He has also been recognized as one of the top 10 most innovative CEOs in banking.

Schulman previously served as group president of Enterprise Growth at American Express where he led its global strategy to expand the company's alternative mobile and online payment services. Prior to joining American Express, he was president of the Prepaid Group at Sprint Nextel Corporation following its acquisition of Virgin Mobile USA, Inc., where he led the company as its founding CEO for eight years. Earlier in his career, Schulman was president and CEO of Priceline Group, Inc., where he led the company through a period of rapid growth and expansion. He also spent 18 years at AT&T, where he held a series of positions, including president of the Consumer Markets Division.

Schulman earned a bachelor's degree from Middlebury College and a master of business from New York University's Stern School of Business. Schulman is a board member of Autism Speaks. He also serves on the boards of Flextronics International Ltd. and Symantec Corporation, where he is the non-executive chair of the board. He is a member of the World Economic Forum's Future of the Global Financial System taskforce. In addition, Schulman is an avid mixed martial arts practitioner.

252nd Anniversary Commencement

Honorary Degree Recipient

RISA LAVIZZO-MOUREY
Doctor of Science

Rutgers is proud to bestow upon Risa Lavizzo-Mourey an honorary doctor of science degree. Lavizzo-Mourey is the president emerita and former CEO of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF), a position she held for nearly 15 years. She was named the RWJF Penn Integrates Knowledge Professor of Population Health and Health Equity at the University of Pennsylvania, with joint appointments in the Perelman School of Medicine, the School of Nursing, and the Wharton School, effective January 1, 2018.

During her tenure at RWJF, Lavizzo-Mourey spearheaded bold health initiatives such as creating healthier, more equitable communities; strengthening the integration of health systems and services; and ensuring every child in the United States has the opportunity to grow up at a healthy weight. Lavizzo-Mourey’s passion and dedication to these causes served as the groundwork for the foundation’s vision of building a Culture of Health, with the goal of enabling everyone in America to live longer, healthier lives.

Prior to joining the foundation, Lavizzo-Mourey, a specialist in geriatrics, served as the Sylvan Eisman Professor of Medicine and Health Care Systems at the University of Pennsylvania. She also directed Penn’s Institute on Aging and was chief of geriatric medicine at the Perelman School of Medicine.

She worked as deputy administrator for the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research under President George H.W. Bush’s administration and continued to direct policy for the subsequent administration, serving as Quality of Care chair for President Bill Clinton’s panels on health care. She has served on numerous federal advisory committees and was appointed by President Barack Obama to the President’s Council on Fitness, Sports, and Nutrition.

She is a member of the National Academy of Medicine, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and The American Philosophical Society. She currently serves on the Smithsonian Institution Board of Regents, as well as on several other boards of directors.

Lavizzo-Mourey is the recipient of numerous awards, including honorary doctorates from Colby College and Brown University. Forbes has included her in its list of the 100 most powerful women in the world eight times, and she has been on Modern Healthcare’s list of 100 most influential people in health care 11 times.

Lavizzo-Mourey earned her medical degree from Harvard Medical School and her master of business administration from the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.
Rutgers is delighted to have Evan Covello represent the Class of 2018. Covello is graduating cum laude with a double major in planning and public policy and human resource management. His interest and participation in public service began at an early age, from studying electoral maps as an elementary school student to serving as student body president at Wayne Valley High School. He has pursued his passion for service as vice president and now president of the Rutgers University Student Assembly (RUSA), representing more than 35,000 undergraduate students of Rutgers University–New Brunswick.

As a member of RUSA, Covello has worked to improve the Rutgers experience and strengthen the voice of his fellow students. He served as the associate director of the Association of Big Ten Students, in which he encouraged collaboration and idea sharing between Rutgers and the other Big Ten universities. Through these coalitions, he helped advocate for the full-year Pell Grant, a proposed expansion of the federal Pell Grant program that would enable undergraduate students to use the grant toward summer and winter courses in order to increase four-year graduation rates.

During his tenure as RUSA president, Covello helped oversee the allocation of funding to more than 450 student organizations. He implemented a policy to increase bystander intervention, leading to training for over 300 students. He also worked with RUSA and Rutgers Counseling, Alcohol and Other Drug Assistance Program and Psychiatric Services to implement an online appointment system and increase the hours of counseling. Last year, Covello spoke at Rutgers’ “It’s On Us” event, part of a national movement to end sexual assault, featuring former Vice President Joe Biden, who drafted the Violence Against Women Act of 1994.

A member of the Cap and Skull senior honor society, Covello has received many honors, including the Bridge Builder Award and the 2018 Chancellor’s Leadership Award for his dedication to advocating for students and commitment to community engagement. He has also had the opportunity to gain meaningful political and governmental experience through internships with the Eagleton Institute of Politics, the gubernatorial campaign to elect Phil Murphy, and the office of Congressman Bill Pascrell of the Ninth Congressional District. Covello has traveled to Washington, DC, to lobby for the Campus Accountability and Safety Act, and for the expansion of college affordability programs.

Following graduation, Covello plans to continue to be engaged in higher education policy and serve his community in meaningful ways. His future work will be driven by his belief that every person deserves access to resources to live and succeed.
ON THE BANKS OF THE OLD RARITAN

From far and near we came to Rutgers,
And resolved to learn all that we can;
And so we settled down, in that noisy college town,
On the banks of the old Raritan.

Chorus:
On the banks of the old Raritan, my friends,
Where old Rutgers evermore shall stand;
For has she not stood since the time of the flood,
On the banks of the old Raritan.

Then sing aloud to alma mater,
And keep the Scarlet in the van;
For with her motto high, Rutgers’ name shall never die
On the banks of the old Raritan.

Chorus:
On the banks of the old Raritan, my friends,
Where old Rutgers evermore shall stand;
For has she not stood since the time of the flood,
On the banks of the old Raritan.

BRIAN C. CHU
Clinical Psychology, Graduate School of Applied and Professional Psychology
Fellow, Association for Behavioral and Cognitive Therapies

Brian C. Chu, associate professor of clinical psychology, has been recognized as a fellow by the Association for Behavioral and Cognitive Therapies for outstanding contributions to the field of behavioral interventions and psychological practice. Chu is the founder and director of the Youth Anxiety and Depression Clinic, a research clinic specializing in evaluating and providing evidence-based care for children and adolescents. His research focuses on the assessment and treatment of anxiety and depressive disorders, dissemination and implementation sciences, and access to care for diverse communities. Chu utilizes mobile applications and web-based coaching technologies to enhance the reach and penetration of behavioral services for treatment and training professionals. Editor of Cognitive and Behavioral Practice, Chu is an accomplished scholar who serves on multiple editorial boards for scientific journals, has published numerous scholarly articles and chapters, and co-edited Transdiagnostic Treatments for Children and Adolescents: Principles and Practice (Guilford, 2013).

LEON FRASER
Management and Global Business, Rutgers Business School–Newark and New Brunswick
Mentor of the Year, National Black MBA Association New Jersey Chapter

Leon Fraser, assistant professor of professional practice in management and global business, was named the Mentor of the Year by the National Black MBA Association New Jersey Chapter in recognition of his significant contributions to support and develop students and business leaders. A renowned professor, Fraser teaches executive leadership, management consulting, and managing workforce diversity to undergraduate and MBA students. He leverages the breadth of his prior work experience at Fortune 100 firms, as a vice president of a start-up, and as a Congressional aide in the content of his teaching as well as with students and alumni who seek him out for career conversations. Fraser has also received many teaching honors from the business school, including the Meritorious Service Award from the dean, Best Professor Award from MBA students, and the Best Management and Global Business Professor Award from undergraduate students.

PAUL G. FALKOWSKI
Bennett L. Smith Chair in Business and Natural Resources, Rutgers Business School–Newark and New Brunswick and School of Arts and Sciences; Marine and Coastal Sciences, School of Environmental and Biological Sciences
Tyler Prize for Environmental Achievement

Paul G. Falkowski, distinguished professor in the departments of Earth and Planetary Sciences and Marine and Coastal Sciences, is the recipient of the Tyler Prize for Environmental Achievement for his work in understanding and communicating the impact of human activity on Earth’s climate. A pioneer in the field of biological oceanography, Falkowski’s work focuses on how microbes, especially unicellular algae (phytoplankton) photosynthesize in the world’s oceans. He has developed novel techniques to measure photosynthesis in the sea and to derive photosynthetic rates from satellite-based measurements of ocean color. Falkowski also leads the Environmental Biophysics and Molecular Ecology Laboratory and is the founding director of the Rutgers Energy Institute. He is the author of a popular science book, Life’s Engines: How Microbes Made Earth Habitable (Princeton University Press, 2015), that explains how microbes created an environment on this planet that enabled the evolution of animals and higher plants.

BRENT D. RUBEN
Communication, School of Communication and Information
Leadership Excellence Award, Baldrige Foundation

Brent D. Ruben, distinguished professor of communication, is the inaugural recipient of the national Leadership Excellence Award in education from the Baldrige Foundation in recognition of his pioneering contributions to adapting the foundation’s model for organizational performance excellence in business to universities and colleges. As a guide for these principles, Ruben created Excellence in Higher Education, which has been used by nearly 50 schools and departments at Rutgers, and at as many universities nationwide. Ruben is the founder and executive director of the Center for Organizational Leadership and has authored numerous publications on higher education, communication, organizations, and leadership. Ruben is a frequent adviser to universities and colleges around the world and has received many honors in recognition of his scholarly and professional leadership, including the Gerald Phillips Award from the National Communication Association.
Charlotte Thomas-Hawkins, associate professor of nursing science, is the recipient of the Outstanding Contribution Award from the American Nephrology Nurses Association, which recognizes one nurse each year who has made exceptional contributions to the growth of nephrology nursing. Thomas-Hawkins, an accomplished practitioner in acute care and outpatient kidney dialysis settings, was the first researcher to quantify the relationships among nursing structures, work environment support, missed care, and patient outcomes in outpatient kidney dialysis facilities in the United States. Her seminal work in this area helped lead to federal policy changes in the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services’ staffing regulations that resulted in adding registered nurses to dialysis facilities nationwide. As director of the Center for Healthcare Quality, Thomas-Hawkins has advanced the science of patient safety and care quality. Her current work is aimed at determining the facility-level effects of nursing systems and processes on value-based outcomes in kidney dialysis facilities.

Yanyong Zhang, professor of electrical and computer engineering, was elected to the IEEE Fellow Grade for her “contributions to robust and efficient large-scale sensor networks.” This prestigious promotion recognizes select IEEE members who have made extraordinary accomplishments in advancing technology. Zhang’s research focuses on sensor networks, mobile computing, and the Internet of Things—physical devices connected to the internet that collect and share data. As a member of the Wireless Information Network Laboratory (WINLAB), an industry-university cooperative research center focused on wireless technology, Zhang works on the MobilityFirst project, which aims to redesign the internet to be more agile, secure, and efficient in handling hundreds of billions of smartphones and other internet-connected objects. Zhang has published over 100 journal articles and co-authored Securing Emerging Wireless Systems: Lower-Layer Approaches (Springer, 2009).

Cheryl A. Wall, Board of Governors Zora Neale Hurston professor of English, is the inaugural recipient of the Octavia E. Butler Award for outstanding contributions to scholarship on black women writers presented by the African American Literature and Culture Society and the Octavia E. Butler Literary Society. In addition to her scholarly contributions, the award cited Wall’s work as an institution-builder and her mentorship of women of color scholars, marked most prominently by her role in creating the African American and Africa Diaspora postdoctoral fellowship at Rutgers. An acclaimed critic in the field of African American literary studies, Wall is the author of several books including Worrying the Line: Black Women Writers, Lineage, and Literary Tradition (University of North Carolina Press, 2005) and her forthcoming book On Freedom and the Will to Adorn: The Art of the African American Essay (University of North Carolina Press, 2019).

University Seal

The university seal is the official imprimatur of Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. As such, it appears on official documents, such as contracts and deeds, and, most notably, on the diplomas issued to graduates of the university.

The outer ring contains the name of the university. The inner ring includes the date of Rutgers’ founding, 1766, as Queen’s College, the eighth institution of higher learning established in the American colonies. The university’s motto, “Sun of righteousness, shine upon the West also,” appears in Latin in the inner ring, surrounding a stylized sunburst. The motto is an adaptation of the motto of Utrecht University, in the Netherlands, connoting the original college’s early affiliation with the Dutch Reformed Church. It is today interpreted as a request for the enlightenment of learning to shine equally upon the New World.

Rutgers Shield

The Rutgers shield was introduced in 2015 as part of the university’s 250th Anniversary. The shield’s elements convey our past and present. The shield is divided into thirds, representing Rutgers’ deep connections to New Jersey’s three regions—north, central, and south—and denoting the university’s tripartite mission—teaching, research, and service.

Five symbolic elements both acknowledge our past and signify that as we evolve, we will uphold core values that have been integral to our identity from our earliest days.

The sunburst conveys illumination—light as metaphor for knowledge—and it is the motif of our seal and the heart of our motto, “Sun of righteousness, shine upon the West also.” Our centuries-old seal and motto are both variants on those of Utrecht University, in the Netherlands; its motto reads, “Sun of righteousness, enlighten us.”

The crown represents our founding in 1766 as Queen’s College, named in honor of Queen Charlotte, wife of Great Britain’s King George III who reigned over the American colonies when our charter was signed.

The university’s founding in 1766 confirms its standing as one of America’s nine original colonial colleges. A decade later, as the American Revolution erupted, the college gave itself over to the cause of freedom, as all “who were able to bear arms immediately marched to oppose the enemy.”

The three stars represent the State of New Jersey, the third state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

The book is a timeless symbol of our enduring commitment to teaching, learning, academic inquiry, and scholarship.
University Mace

The university mace, an ornamental staff symbolizing the authority of the president, is borne before the president in academic processions by the secretary of the university.

The design of the Rutgers mace incorporates signs of the institution’s traditions and status as New Jersey’s state university. The head of the mace bears the university’s coat of arms and its seal worked in colored enamel and gold on silver, all surmounted by a facsimile of the crown of Queen Charlotte, for whom the university was originally named “Queen’s.” The long shaft is made of stained wood and silver on which are engraved intertwining ivy leaves, symbolizing learning; red oak leaves, representing New Jersey’s state tree; and violets, the state flower.

The mace was a gift to the university from the Raritan Valley Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management and the New Brunswick-Raritan Valley Chamber of Commerce, in recognition of Rutgers’ bicentennial commemoration in 1966. The mace was designed by J. Russell Price, director of design for the Gorham Manufacturing Company, and crafted by the Gorham silversmithing department.

Red Lion Bell

Students who process in University Commencement may ring the Red Lion Bell to signal their arrival.

The name “Red Lion” harks back to 1771, when a handful of students attended the first classes of Queen’s College in a converted tavern, called the Sign of the Red Lion, located at the corner of Albany and Neilson streets in New Brunswick. The bell itself is part of a Rutgers graduation tradition. In 1825, Colonel Henry Rutgers donated the interest on a $5,000 bond and a bell to the then struggling Queen’s College. The money kept the college alive and as a token of its gratitude, Queen’s College was renamed Rutgers College. With a beautiful new bell in place, every graduating member of Rutgers College would ring “The Old Queens Bell” as a rite of passage before graduation.

Today it is not possible to ring the actual 1825 bell. However, to keep the tradition alive, an alumnus, who wishes to stay anonymous, donated this smaller bell to the Rutgers University Historical Society. During New Student Convocation held at the start of the academic year, incoming students ring the bell to mark the beginning of their studies. At University Commencement, the bell is stationed at High Point Solutions Stadium, where graduating students may ring it to signify their graduation, continuing a beloved Rutgers tradition in a new way.
The wearing of academic dress dates back to the early days of the oldest universities in the world. In the American Council on Education’s book entitled American Universities and Colleges, it is suggested that “Gowns may have been counted necessary for warmth in the unheated buildings frequented by medieval scholars. Hoods seem to have served to cover the tonsured head. . . .”

Throughout the years, European universities have shown great diversity in their academic dress. American universities, on the other hand, when they decided to adopt academic dress, immediately established a code of regulations that today is followed by almost all American institutions. This code has made it possible to distinguish the bachelors, masters, and doctors and, at the same time, recognize the university that has given them the degree.

Gowns: The bachelor’s gown has pointed sleeves and is worn closed. The master’s gown, worn open or closed, has oblong sleeves, the front part of which frequently is cut away at the elbow. The doctor’s gown has bell-shaped sleeves. It is worn open or closed.

At Rutgers, members of the Board of Governors and Board of Trustees, as well as those who hold a doctoral degree from the university, wear the Rutgers gown, which is scarlet with black velvet front panels framed on the outer edge with gold cord braid. The velvet panels are embroidered with a crown and the year 1766 at the neck, signifying the university’s founding as one of the original colonial colleges under King George III of England.

Hoods: The hoods vary in size: 48 inches for the doctor’s degree, 42 inches for the master’s, and 36 inches for the bachelor’s. All hoods are lined in silk in the academic color or colors of the institution conferring the degree. If the institution has more than one color, the colors are shown in divisions using chevrons.

Below is a list of some of the faculty colors as prescribed by the Intercollegiate Code for the binding of the hood:
